

Babe's Fiber Garden, LLC as October 27, 2008 has a new Web 2.0 website at babesfibergarden.com. This past summer there was a story in the paper telling about Wisconsin Center for IT Services and that they were looking for small businesses where they could give students actual working experience in website design and development. Of course, I signed up and after a short and fast few months I have a Web 2.0 website that saves me time with the use of a data base and makes much more sense than the old site.

A big thank you for a job well done goes to Paul Ambrose, John Chenoweth, Aaron Patrick, Amy Caywood, and Angela Banike. If you would like, take a few minutes and read about their program at wicits.uww.edu it might be helpful for you or someone you know.
